Trainer: James Peck, Psy.D.

James Peck, Psy.D. is a licensed clinical psychologist and senior clinical trainer at the UCLA Integrated Substance Abuse Programs (ISAP). For nearly a decade, Dr. Peck conducted Phase II clinical trials of behavioral and pharmacological interventions for stimulant dependence. Dr. Peck has extensive experience conducting curriculum development, clinical trainings, and clinical supervision on the etiology, assessment, and treatment of substance-related disorders, and on the treatment of individuals with co-occurring substance-related and psychiatric disorders. He currently works at UCLA in a primarily clinical training role, and maintains a busy practice treating individuals with co-occurring disorders including HIV and HCV.

Overview and Learning Objectives

Motivational interviewing, a treatment approach developed by William Miller, has been well established as an effective way to promote behavior change in individuals. This face-to-face training course requires previous training and experience using motivational interviewing techniques in clinical practice. It will provide in depth instruction, practice, and feedback on fostering and utilizing change talk to increase client motivation, and movement toward change across all health, mental health and substance use conditions.

At the conclusion of the training, participants will be able to:

1. Define at least three (3) key principles of motivational interviewing
2. Compare the effectiveness of motivational interviewing to traditional approaches to counseling individuals with substance use problems
3. Describe and demonstrate the effective delivery of at least three MI micro-skills that be used to help individuals increase motivation for substance use related changes
4. Explain how to apply motivational interviewing techniques in typical clinical circumstances staff
